As a young nation grew into its own, it was not just the presidents who led the way. The remarkable women of the White